The Human Resource Development Committee presents:
ENGAGING THE MULTI-GENERATIONAL WORKFORCE
Immediately following the Business to Business Breakfast

The purpose of this session is to provide basic knowledge of the differences presented by a multi-generational workforce. Learn how to engage employees in a cohesive, effective and collaborative work environment. Discussion will include generational characteristics, how generational behaviors and expectations impact the workplace, and utilizing the value each generation engenders to create a better workforce.

Who should attend: Business owners, educators, human resource professionals, workplace managers, and members generally interested in the workplace differences among workers born in different decades.

The presenter of this program is: Nancy Arduengo, Ph. D.

Nancy Arduengo, past president of the Sussex/Warren Human Resource Mgmt. Assoc., is an organization development professional specializing in team building and executive coaching. She holds a Bachelor's degree in Business Administration/Human Resources Management, a Master of Science Degree in Organization Development, and both a Masters and a Ph.D. in Human Development.
